There are only 6,600 Sumatran Orangutans left in the wild and, through habitat loss and hunting, may be the first of the Great Apes to become extinct.

"It was a fantastic experience, not to mention giving something back to the world while doing it, makes it all the more satisfying"

Lauren Henley

"Rainforest Rescue is a not for profit organisation that has been protecting and restoring rainforests in Australia and internationally since 1998. Rainforest Rescue projects re-establish rainforests through planting, maintenance and restoration programs, as well as purchasing and protecting high conservation value rainforest and preserving its biodiversity. Your funds raised will directly support Rainforest Rescue restoration and protection programs in Indonesia"

Rainforest Rescue : Creating tourism models that value the standing and expanding forests.
